“Cookies and Hard Problems: Cybersecurity, Corporate Governance, and the Realities of Being a CISO”

Thursday, November 15, 2018
1:15–2:15 pm | Maurer School of Law, Room 216

Wafaa Mamilli, Eli Lilly chief information security officer, leads a global, enterprise-wide information and product security organization integrating People, Process and Technology to Protect the confidentiality, integrity, and availability of information, systems, and products while enabling Lilly’s mission to make medicines that help people live longer, healthier, more active lives. During this session, she will dive into navigating the responsibilities of a CISO, and more generally exploring the intersection of cybersecurity and corporate governance.

Coffee and cookies will be served. For questions, contact Scott Shackelford (sjshacke@indiana.edu).
