One of the enduring foundations of the Ostrom workshop has been the Monday Colloquium Series, which commenced in 1973. The series has provided a forum for a breadth of presenters and topics over the years that have echoed the themes of the Ostrom Workshop's research program.

The 2020 schedule of the series starts on Monday, September 14 with Professor Emeritus Mike McGinnis. Click here for the entire Colloquium

NSF Grant on Governing Knowledge Commons Awarded to Team That Includes Ostrom Workshop Affiliates

Knowledge commons refer to the institutionalized community governance of sharing, creating, and curating a wide range of intellectual and cultural resources. This project will establish a Research Coordination Network (RCN) designed to build a research community that will advance these scientific principles. In doing so it will aid in the development of empirical and theoretical insights into commons governance of shared knowledge, information, and data resources.

Led by Principle Investigators Brett Frischmann, Katherine Strandburg, and Micael Madison, this RCN will assemble researchers from law, the social and behavioral sciences, computer science, and engineering to communicate, coordinate and integrate their research and educational activities across disciplinary and organizational boundaries.
